Components of the Book Review:

Introduction: Please explain what the book is about, which period it covers, what is the main problem/question the book is trying to address.

Author(s): Who is the author? Some background would provide context for the readers.

Core arguments: What is the key message the author is trying to articulate? Even in edited volumes, there is a thematic coherence that all contributors converge around. Briefly explain that shared theme in all chapters.

Methods and Content: Explain the methods the author(s) employed. Describe critical cases they used, if possible. You can do a chapter by chapter summary, or bundle similar chapters together for a more thematic summary. Try to keep this section short, clear and concise.

Strengths & Weaknesses of the Book: In what ways does the book stand out? Provide examples. How does it complement the literature? In what ways does the book fall short of delivering what it intends to deliver? Use critical thinking skills, while being fair.

Conclusion: Summarize your overall opinion of the book. Mention what kind of an audience would the book appeal the most.
